Web link for international students	https://www.politihogskolen.no/english/about/organisation/international-relations.html Please note: the majority of our courses require Norwegian citizenship, fluency in a Norwegian, Swedish or Danish and either student status or employment in a police organization or possibly one of the allied professions (ie emergency services, social work, etc). Please contact us if you wonder if you can qualify.
Course offerings bachelor students	International Student Weeks. We have three international student weeks during the spring semester. The courses are weighted at three ECTS and students receive a certificate describing the workload and learning outcomes. Due to technical restrictions, we cannot print transcripts for these ECTS. The courses are reserved for partners who contribute teachers, but each year we have some available spaces. UArctic students who are interested must have one year of experience in criminal justice/policing studies to apply. The courses are tuition free. Current topics are:

	Operative Communication (procedural justice), Preventive policing, and Mental Preparedness (you must be enrolled in a police studies program with operative experience for this course). English is the language of instruction. Please contact Suzanne Bancel for more information: suzban@pfs.no for more information.
Course offerings Master students	Students enrolled in masters programs in criminal justice, policing studies, public safety and preparedness etc. may qualify to take one of our electives. However, most of the masters programs require employment in a police service to qualify. The teaching language is Norwegian. Please contact Kirsti Messel if you think you may qualify: kirmes@pfs.no
Fields of Study Offered	Protection of persons and property
